

Maria João Rodrigues: “What we need is a fully fledged European Social Union” (video)
By euvisions

European Social Union: a public forum debate

The “European Social Union: a public forum debate” is an editorial project dealing with the possible establishment of a European Social Union (ESU), the prospects of the European Pillar of Social Rights (EPSR) and the role that the latter might play as one of ESU’s key components.

A set of articles authored by high-level academic figures will discuss the raison d’être of ESU, the EPSR and their mutual link from a variety of perspectives.

In parallel with the publication of these in-depth articles, EuVisions will produce a second set of contents, involving policymakers and top officials. This second series of contents will take the form of podcast- and video-interviews.

The aim of the editorial project is to let the potentials of ESU and the EPSR emerge during the run-up to the next European elections of May 2019.

EuVisions aims at involving key national and European media outlets, as well as think tanks and universities to maximise the reach of this debate.

European Social Union: podcast series